KARL LIEBKNECHT AND CHIEF LIEUTENANT, ROSA LUXEMBURG, SHOT TO DEATH IN BERLIN

Soldiers Kill Captive Radical Leader When He Attempts to Escape.

WOMAN IS SLAIN BY MOB

Fraulein Luxemburg is First Beaten Into Insensibility and Started for Prison When Another Mob Halts Car; Bullet in Head Ends Career.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg have been killed.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 17.—Officers commanding the troops escorting Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg when those two radical leaders were killed have been provisionally arrested, according to a Berlin dispatch received here, which adds that all persons implicated in the incident will be severely punished.

BERLIN, Thursday, Jan. 17.—Dr. Karl Liebknecht has been shot and killed while trying to escape as he was being taken to prison, according to the Frankfort Gazette. It is also reported that Rosa Luxemburg, Dr. Liebknecht's chief lieutenant was also shot dead after being beaten into unconsciousness by a crowd in Berlin.

When it became known yesterday that Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg were at the Hotel Eden in the western part of the city a crowd rapidly congregated and stormed the hotel lobby to lay hands on them. Both were spirited to a side entrance of the hotel, but the mob forestalled the attempt to save Fraulein Luxemburg. She was beaten into insensibility and then thrown into an automobile by the crowd which intended to take her to prison.

A few blocks down the street the machine was halted by a second mob and when the presence of Fraulein Luxemburg became known a man jumped on the running board of the car and shot her through the head. The body was dragged from the machine and carried off. It is supposed that it was thrown into the canal, but it has not been found.

In the meantime Dr. Liebknecht was hurried into another automobile by officers and troops and the car was headed for the Moabit prison. While going through the Tiergarten the machine was halted by a punctured tire. Dr. Liebknecht was asked to get out by the officers who intended to hail another automobile and continue toward the prison. While waiting Dr. Liebknecht made an attempt to escape and was shot dead by soldiers who had anticipated such an effort on his part.

BERLIN, Thursday, Jan. 16.—Virtually the entire Berlin press regards the fate of Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rose Luxemburg, the Spartacan leaders, as "having something of divine justice in it," as the Tage Zeitung phrases it.

Of Dr. Liebknecht the Lokal Anzeiger says "he brought his fate upon himself." Continuing its comment the newspaper says:

"The murder of Rosa Luxemburg shows how tremendous must have been the indignation which has seized the people of Berlin as the result of the criminal activities of the Spartacans. Such summary judgments have ordinarily been foreign to the German manner of thinking."

There is general agreement that Liebknecht lacked the qualities for a really constructive leadership and that Rosa Luxemburg was, as the Tageblat says, "the real man in the Spartacan movement."

GRAY BACK WITH W. M.

Former President of System is Made Chairman of Board of Directors.

Carl R. Gray, who resigned as director of operations of the national Railroad Administration, has been elected president and chairman of the board of directors of the Western Maryland Railway Corporation.

He succeeds Lawrence Greer, formerly vice president and general counsel of the company, who was elected chief executive, to succeed Mr. Gray, when the latter resigned more than a year ago to go to Washington.

In some quarters the election of Mr. Gray to again head the Western Maryland is taken to mean that the roads will shortly return to their private owners and that the Rockefellers are paving the way for this return by placing Mr. Gray in his old position.

Mr. Gray came to Baltimore in 1914 to rehabilitate the Western Maryland property, which was on the verge of receivership.

MEMBER OF MANHATTAN COMPANY GONE, ALSO IS OVER $350 IN MONEY

Police Are Notified to be on Lookout for One James Delaird, Who Hired With Players Wednesday.

James Delaird, who joined the Manhattan Players, now playing at the Soisson, Wednesday is suspected of having absconded with the company's share of yesterday's performances.

Delaird applied to Manager Paul Hillis Tuesday with the plea that he was "broke" and that he wanted a job with the company. The man had evidently had experience in show work, for programs left in his bag at his room in Stag hotel have his name on them and a notebook left there also has a list of towns and companies he is supposed to have played. He was for some time advance agent for Sartello, the magician.

This morning Mr. Larned, the business manager, went to the bath room to wash, leaving the money in his room. When he returned Delaird had gone and the money had also disappeared. There was over $300 of the company's money. It is said Delaird also took what money Mr. Larned had, amounting to over $50. The police have been notified.

DEMAND FOR COAL SLUMPS; OWNERS CLOSING PLANTS

Depression Reaching Lowest Level in Bituminous Region in Many Years.

SIDINGS ARE CONGESTED

Reported 10,000 Cars Are Standing Between Connellsville and Pittsburg Because of Cancellation of Orders; Market May Be Restored Shortly.

According to local coal operators the bituminous coal trade at the present time is experiencing the most serious depression in many years. As one man remarked yesterday, "the bottom has dropped entirely out of the coal business." The transition from war to peace conditions and the cancelling of many orders are generally given as the reason for the falling off in the market.

A local man who is interested in the coal business said yesterday that he would sell 10 cars immediately at $1.40 a ton. He declared there were 10,000 cars of coal on sidings between here and Pittsburg without a market. The operator declared that in the view of others with whom he had talked, there would be no relief for six months.

Operators say mills are cancelling orders, declaring they are temporarily going to close down. "When this period came on," said a mine owner, "I kept up operations because I didn't think it would last long. I would mine 10 cars a day to one sold. Now I have too much coal on my hands. I've closed down my mines."

Although some operators declare they see no relief for six months, others believe the depression will not last over three months, and that the market will certainly pick up again in the spring.

It is not hard to locate idle mines at this time. Many of the smaller privately owned plants have been closed, and it is rumored that some of the largest operations are to be partially shut down.

The depression, of course, does not so seriously affect the mines whose outputs are covered by contracts. If the depression continues for any length of time additional mines will probably close and it may also result in operators selling coal at much lower prices.

INTEREST GROWS APACE IN BUCKNER REVIVAL SERVICES

Largest Audience of Week on Hand Last Night; Interesting Features Being Arranged.

The largest and most attentive audience of the week greeted Rev. G. W. Buckner and his assistants, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Boyer at the Christian church last night. The fore part of the evening was given to a service of praise and thanksgiving because of the ratification of the prohibition amendment. This was followed by a rousing song service.

Rev. Buckner took his theme from Acts 18:9-10—"Then spoke the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision: 'Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace, for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee, for I have much people in this city.'" Paul had left Athens, the speaker pointed out, and had come to Corinth and had met some people there of his same craft. He abode with them and preached in the synagogue each Sabbath. But the Jews refused to hear him and the greatest event in Paul's life took place when he turned to the Gentiles.

Rev. Buckner said that a colored preacher once gave the definition of "election" thus: "The devil votes against you, the Lord votes for you, and you hold the deciding vote." When the song of invitation was sung two people responded, making this the greatest meeting thus far.

The prayer service at the church yesterday was largely attended. Mr. Buckner and the Boyers held a shop meeting at the laundry today and a similar meeting will be held each day when convenient. A nursery has been equipped in the church building so that any persons having small children can attend the services and feel sure their children will be well taken care of by competent persons. Cottage prayer meetings in all sections of the city were held this afternoon. The "magic trick" services will be held at the church Saturday afternoon at 2:30. Every child is invited, free of charge. Services will be held every night at 7:30. Mr. Boyer extends a cordial and urgent invitation to all singers of the city to come and assist in the chorus.

HEAVY LOSSES OF 110TH

Result of Brigade Headquarters "Having Fallen Down on the Job," Asserts Commander of 109th Regiment; Sensational Statement is Expected.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 17.—National Guard officers who led their men to victory with the heroic 28th Division from Pennsylvania said yesterday that every charge made against the War Department by Representative James A. Gallivan, of Massachusetts, in his speech before the House Tuesday could be paralleled by their own experiences at the front in France. In his address Representative Gallavin declared that the purpose of the War Department's order stopping promotions upon the signing of the armistice was to make way for Regular Army officers "most of whom would run away from a baked apple."

In commenting upon the matter Colonel Millard D. Brown of Germantown said he and Colonel George E. Kemp had been "pushed out of our commands because our brigadier (regular army man) passed the buck on us." This passing the buck relates to a miscarriage of orders for an attack and an appalling loss of life in the 110th Infantry.

Colonel Brown took the First Infantry to Camp Hancock. When that regiment was united with the old 13th of Scranton, to form the 109th Infantry, Colonel Brown, not 40 years old, was placed in command. He was the youngest colonel in command of a fighting regiment in France when he went over.

Colonel Kemp was the commander of the old Third Infantry of this city, which was combined with the "Fighting Tenth," to form the 110th Infantry. Both of these regiments won undying fame for their valor and conduct under fire, and as a part of the 28th Division are permitted to wear a red keystone, the insignia of their citation by General Pershing.

Colonel Brown, who also is now in civil life, said he felt the entire operation of this well-known "system" was to discredit the guard officers and to break up the state militia.

Colonel Brown said any congressional investigation would reveal many interesting features regarding the work and experiences of the American National Guard in France. He said he would have a complete tale to unfold as soon as Colonel Kemp was mustered out and returned to this country.

Colonel Brown intimated that he would reveal a sensational story when he and Colonel Kemp were able to make an identical statement. It is probable that it will give an unrevealed chapter in the history of the 110th Infantry.

A tale of appalling losses has been told by the wounded men in the various hospitals. It seems that the men were ordered to advance but that the orders were not given until 30 minutes after the hour set, and the 110th walked into a devastating fire. The wounded soldiers who returned have spoken freely about the slaughter that followed.

It is intimated from Colonel Brown's story that the failure of the orders to reach the regimental headquarters was due to the brigade headquarters "having fallen down on the job." An inquiry was conducted into the miscarriage of the attack and Major General Charles H. Muir, then division commander, is said to have absolved Brigadier General Thomas W. Darrah, commander of the infantry brigade, from all blame. Shortly afterward Colonel Brown and Colonel Kemp were detailed to other duties.

In regard to his experience Colonel Brown said: "Colonel Kemp and myself were pushed out of our commands because the brigade commander, General Thomas W. Darrah, passed us the buck. A congressional inquiry would reveal many strange and interesting things, too, I know."

COMPANY C BOY HOME

Private Beaver Adds Confirmation to Reported Death of Lieut. Crouse.

Private Samuel Beaver, a member of Company C, 110th Infantry, arrived at Somerset on Wednesday, being the first member of the Somerset company to return home. Private Beaver, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Beaver of Berlin, says that Lieutenant Crouse of the company was killed in action on July 15 when so many of the members of the compay were killed or captured by the Germans. He declares he saw Lieutenant Crouse lying on the battlefield with the top of his head shot away.

On July 15 Private Beaver was wounded three times, once in the head and twice in the arm. He was captured in this battle and was sent to a German prison camp. Later he was transferred to a German farm where he labored from 4 o'clock in the morning until 7 in the evening. Private Beaver apparently is in good health despite the harrowing experiences he had during the battle and in the prison camp.

WITH DRY NATION ASSURED, PROHIBITIONISTS NOW TURN ATTENTION TO A DRY WORLD

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—A "dry" world is the objective of prohibition forces, now that the "dry" constitutional amendment has been ratified by the necessary three-fourths of the states, Virgil G. Hinshaw, national chairman of the Prohibition party, said yesterday.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Ratification yesterday of the federal constitutional prohibition amendment made the United States the first great power to take legislative action permanently to stop the liquor traffic.

Discussion as to whether the new amendment becomes a part of the constitution now that 36 states have ratified it or whether it becomes a part of the basic law only when each state has certified its action to the secretary of state led to a search for precedent which showed that the only two amendments ratified in the last half century, providing for income taxes and direct election of senators were considered effective immediately the 36th state had taken affirmative action.

New problems of government are raised by the prospective stoppage of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor, as hundreds of millions of dollars derived from internal revenue will have to be obtained from other sources. Laws for enforcement of the amendment also will have to be passed by Congress.

Only a minimum of unemployment is expected to result, as the cumulative [illegible] measures adopted since the war began already has caused many distillers and brewers to seek other uses for their plants. Hundreds of millions of dollars are invested in distilleries and breweries.

More than half the territory of the United States already is "dry" through state action or local option. Until recently the movement of limited quantities of liquor for personal use was permitted, but the Supreme court ruled several days ago that the Reed "bone dry" amendment made such traffic illegal.

GIVEN UP FOR DEAD, STAR JUNCTION BOY WRITES HE'S COMING HOME WITH A BRIDE

After she had given her son, David, up for lost, Mrs. E. Griffith of Star Junction was happily surprised the other day to receive a long letter from him, indicating that while he was wounded in the Argonne he has about recovered. The letter was written December 17 by a friend at David's dictation. Griffith, who is a member of Battery B, 10th Field Artillery, enlisted November 17, 1917, and was trained at Douglas, Ariz. The letter contains the news that when he comes home Griffith will be accompanied by a French girl bride. In part it reads: "Dear Mother:

"I shall have to ask your pardon for not writing oftener, but you know that it is hard to put your mind on a letter in present surroundings. I shall try to give you an outline of what we have been through.

"On July 5 we went into action at Chateau Thierry, just in time for the German drive which started on the 15th. We did some pretty hard fighting. I was a member of a gun crew. After the big drive we were relieved for 10 days' rest. Then started the American counter offensive on the St. Mihiel front. From St. Mihiel we hiked every night for eight nights, arriving on the Verdun front. We were not there very long before business began. When the drive started we moved up to the Argonne woods. There we encountered another very hard job. There are a number of hills and valleys there—a very trying piece of land for our infantry. Many of our men and horses were lost at that point. Volunteers were called to go to the front line trenches with a 75—five of us stepped out. On the second day a shell hit in the same hole when we were taking shelter, killing one of the crew and wounding three of us. I had three German officers' helmets that morning but lost them when I got hit.

"I was taken from there to an evacuation hospital. There we entrained for the base at Ellery. I received very good care. I still have a small scar left near my left eye. Outside of that I am O. K. From Ellery we were sent to Is-sur-Tille, a replacement camp. I forgot to tell you we are in the Third Division. You have seen by the papers where the Third has been.

"You will have to make room for my wife when I come home for I am going to bring one of those French girls. Our division is a part of the Army of Occupation so you see it may be some time before we start home.

A postscript written by Tom Pile, a friend, says:—

"You have probably guessed before this that Dave did not write this letter, although he directed it. I am a friend of his from the same division, so you see we have been through almost the same experiences, therefore we help each other to remember the past events. Dave has told me a lot about Mrs. Griffith. I feel that you are like my mother used to be. I lost her last August. Dave has promised me that I am to meet you. I assure you that I am looking forward to that time with pleasure."

Plans are about complete for the annual memorial exercises of the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's association to be held in the high school auditorium on Sunday afternoon. The program for the services is being drawn up today by the committee in charge. From advices received by Fire Chief W. E. DeBolt, who is president of the association, it seems certain that there will be at least 1,200 members of the organization here for the exercises.

The memorial services are open to the public and everyone is extended an invitation to attend. A section will be reserved for the visiting firemen. The fire companies will meet at the fire station in the West Side on Sunday afternoon and march to the high school building in a body.

A meeting of the executive committee will be held here on Saturday night. Most of the firemen who will attend the services will arrive here Saturday and a big attendance is expected at the meeting which is open to every member. If the attendance is light the session may be held in the rooms in the fire station, but otherwise it will be in the West Side auditorium.

The business of the association, which has been left standing since the convention last summer was called off on account of the war, will be cleared up. It is also probable that the place for the holding of the next convention will come before the meeting. Connellsville has been rumored as being after the convention again, and local firemen have expressed themselves in favor of having the association as their guests this summer.

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. WORTHLINE, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

For Early Spring Street Wear

If it is to be a contest between the one-piece trotteur and the two-piece suit for springtime street wear, such handsome outfits as that pictured above will help the cause of suits immensely. Suits have turned in the direction of unusual lines. What with Chinese coats that have proved so effective in the popular short fur coats for midwinter, and the straight up-and-down models that have just appeared in the handsomest materials, and sleeves that flare at the wrist or go to the opposite extreme and are skin tight, suits have not by any means played all their trump cards. Skirts are narrow and plain, distinguished by many variations as to management of waistline and pockets. They are no longer than for some time, but, as to coats, one cannot generalize—there is too great a variety in them, too much individuality of design.

The chic suit in the picture is an example of an individual style, which manages an almost straight-line silhouette in spite of some fullness in its skirt. The broad, shaped girdle is placed somewhat below the waistline, fastening to the left with a buckle, and there is an odd group of tucks stitched in oblongs with parallel sides, which the tailor must have put in just to show how expert his work can be or to make up for pockets which he has had the hardihood to omit. This omission is indeed unusual. Velvet in bands replaces fur as a trimming, finishing the pointed bottom of the coat and placed at the top of the small close-fitting cuff. It overlays the collar at the back and part way down the sides.

It is early in the season to consider suits for spring, but spring arrives in January or February in our southern states; we shall have time to study suits and the trotteur long before the approach of Easter, when we are expected to be suited or otherwise outfitted in the North.

DAILY HEALTH TALKS

What Is The Cause of Backache?

BY DOCTOR CORNELL

Backache is perhaps the most common ailment from which women suffer. Rarely do you find anybody free from it. Sometimes the cause is obscure, but Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., a high medical authority, says the cause is very often a form of catarrh that settles in the delicate membranes of the feminine organs. When these organs are inflamed, the first symptom is backache, accompanied by bearing-down sensations, weakness, unhealthy discharges, irregularity, painful periods, irritation, headache and a general run-down condition. Any woman in this condition is to be pitied, but pity does not cure. The trouble calls for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is a separate and distinct medicine for women. It is made of roots and herbs put up without alcohol or opiate of any kind, for Dr. Pierce uses nothing else in his prescription. Favorite Prescription is a natural remedy for women, for the vegetable growths of which it is made seem to have been intended by Nature for that very purpose. Thousands of girls and women, young and old, have taken it, and thousands have written grateful letters to Dr. Pierce saying it made them well. In taking Favorite Prescription, it is reassuring to know that it goes straight to the cause of the trouble. There is but one way to overcome sickness, and that is to overcome the cause. That is precisely what Favorite Prescription is intended to do.

THE PEOPLE'S VICTORY.

The ratification of the constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation and transportation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes in all territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, is a victory for which the sovereign people of the nation alone can claim the credit. Men whose broad vision of the needs, ideals and aspirations of the people set them apart as real leaders have long ago sensed the drift of current thought and sentiment on this question, and have done much to shape public opinion for a final determination of the issue, but the time-serving politicians who trim sail to suit each veering of the wind, have no right, however vehemently or plausibly they may assert it, to claim either credit or honor for the result.

In the approval expressed by the people through their representatives in the state legislatures, where has been such an unanimity that it is plain very serious thought had been given the question, from more than one point of view, and an uncompromising decision reached. Otherwise it would not appear possible that so overwhelming a sentiment in favor of the measure would have developed from a purely moral, a purely academic, a purely theoretical, a purely political, or a purely local consideration of the issue.

Having in recent years become an economic question, equal in importance as a moral question, the necessity for a solution of it has appealed with growing force to the hard common sense of a constantly increasing number of people. Many of these, in earlier years of the movement to secure national prohibition, were either indifferent or outspokenly antagonistic to it when asked to consider it from the single standpoint of the advocates of that day. As the effects of intemperance upon industry became more noticeable and obliged employers to seek means for counteracting it, the attitude of many who had previously regarded the question as one affecting individuals only, rather than society as a whole, brought about a marked change in public sentiment. More accurate would it be to say, perhaps, that there was a crystallization of sentiment as to the desirability, and even the economic and industrial necessity, of radical measures to suppress the liquor traffic.

Incidentally the association of liquor with politics assumed such formidable proportions and developed such outrageous abuses and so often thwarted the will of the people in the choice of men for office, that the elimination of this vicious factor in political activities has been declared by a vast body of voters and citizens as imperative in order to preserve the integrity of a free ballot. This baneful influence of the liquor traffic, for which the politicians are the most to blame, next to the effect of intemperance on industry, has, in recent years, served to concentrate and strengthen the popular demand that it be bodily rooted out and its existence as a legalized industry be made to cease.

The people were slow to reach this conclusion, relying more on their own judgment as to a course of action than heedful of the counsel of prejudiced or partisan advisors, just as they were slow to a righteous wrath against Germany for her crimes and cruelties. Once convinced by their own methods of reasoning that ratification of the amendment was needful, just as they were convinced of the justice of waging war against Germany, the people in the power of their might made their determination known.

Ratification is therefore the people's victory in as full a sense as the war was the people's war.

Those senators who voted to dismiss the disloyalty charges against their colleague, Senator La Follette, are entitled to all the satisfaction they may derive from having condoned his offenses. There is no danger that they will be overburdened with messages of congratulation from their patriotic constituents.

ANY OLD PLACE.

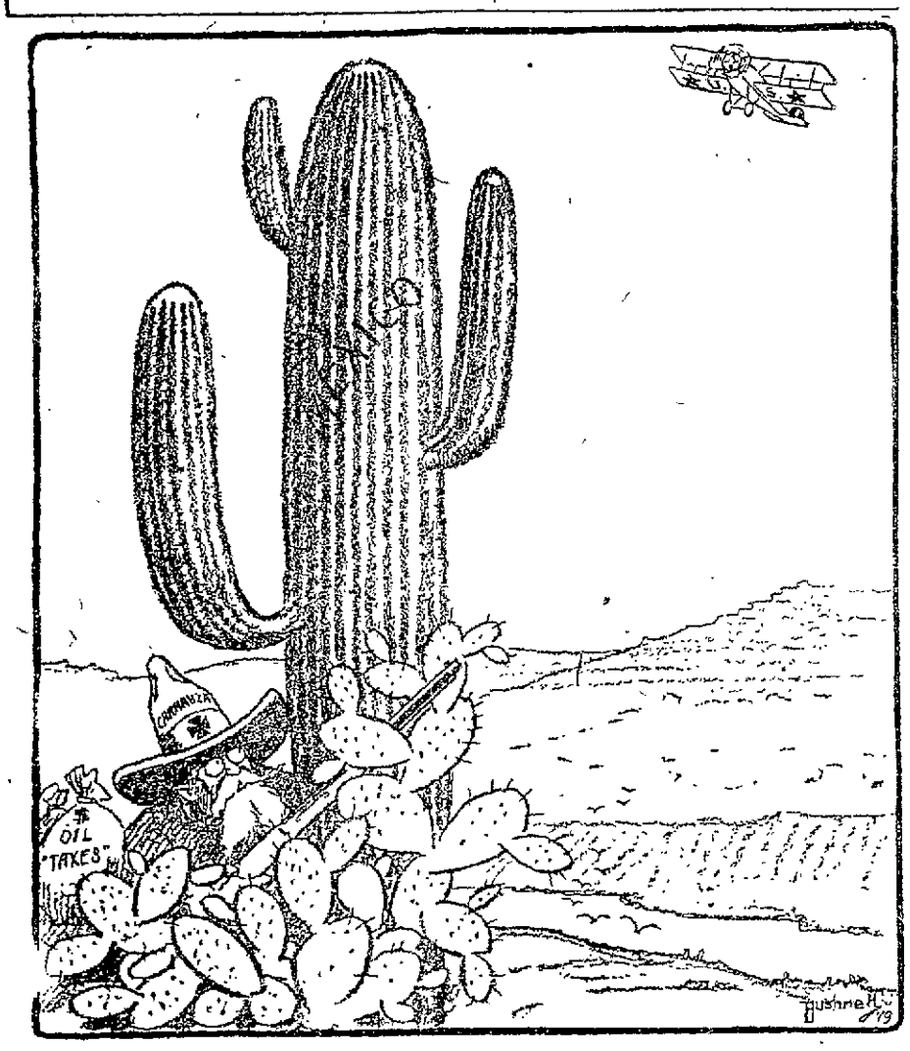
He didn't have much of a job to begin with,
But he saw in it a chance to get in with.
The pay wasn't great and the tasks that they set him
But little of notice or favor would get him.
He'd be hid in a corner and kept out of sight;
And with indifferent toil he could get by all right;
But he said: "I will take it, and do it with care
And make them discover the fact that I'm there."

'Twasn't long after he had decided to take it
He found that a regular job he could make it.
Said the foreman one day: "That new boy is a dandy;
He's willing and cheerful and useful and handy.
He's here when you want him, and, curious to tell,
Whatever I give him to do, he does well."
Then the boss soon found out why the foreman had praised him,
Looked up the pay he was getting, then raised him.

Got so in time that most everyone knew him—
Gave him the credit and confidence due him.
Still he went on, with a smile on his face,
Making the most that he could of his place.
Then came a day the directors all voted him
Fit for a bigger job. So they promoted him.
Trivial his start, but it's needless to tell
He'd made it important by doing it well.

Any old job's good enough to begin with,
If you see in it a chance to get in with.
Any old place, if you're willing to take it,
Is bound to become just as big as you make it.
Do well what's your duty, it matters not where,
And someone will surely discover you there.
It isn't the job that is great in life's plan;
Success, in all places, must come from the man.

THE FOX AND THE EAGLE



The Aeroplane Mail

H. H. Windsor in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

A lot of progress has admittedly been made in the world in other than postoffice affairs, since the day when the old stage and its six-in-hand lumbered up to the tavern with its passengers and—important event—the mail. The mail is the one big lottery approved alike by church and state, and in a way mildly satisfies that spirit of gambling which seems inert in even the most correct, for one never knows what may come next—a bequest or a bill.

The history of letter carrying has always been an interesting picture. It starts with the solitary messenger, on foot, braving the danger of wild animals and wild men. Then the mounted courier, first a plodding horseman on an indifferent beast, and later a regular Paul Revere with frequent relays of fresh, fleet horses. Next the stage with its impressive function, whose arrival was really an event. From stage we diverge to steamboat and railroad train, and some look forward to a near future in which even these two shall converge in those swift vehicles of the air which are hoped to leave behind all previous carrying agencies as a mere speck on the horizon. Ever since that British airman carried a piano as ballast from somewhere in England to another somewhere in France, anything short of moving a house via the air route seems possible.

The service is so new and inexperienced, however, we should not be too impatient of immediate results, for obviously a general's important orders which must reach a distant point regardless of danger to life or loss of machine, if only minutes can be saved, is quite a different proposition from the great bulk of business and personal correspondence which can already be transmitted between points a thousand miles apart in as many minutes by telephone or telegraph as an aeroplane would require hours to accomplish.

More business documents will never warrant the peril to life and limb which is an accepted risk in warfare.

The few attempts with long-distance mail planes which have been made during the past 30 days suggest the need of considerable perfecting of aircraft before a regular, dependable air service is possible. The attempted flight from the Pacific coast to Washington with only two scheduled stops got no farther than Arizona, while the attempt to start daily planes simultaneously from New York and Chicago was a complete fizzle. In each case the mail eventually was brought by railroad the second half of its journey, and consumed from twice to three times the time it would have made on a fast mail train. To accomplish even this, Carl Smith, a balloonist and aviator of 11 years' experience, was killed, and his machine wrecked. Other aviators were injured, and machines damaged.

In our impatience of results we are apt to lose sight of the fact that air travel will always be handicapped by storms and air conditions which do not seriously interfere with either a railroad train or a steamship, both of which have a substantial body on which to travel. An express train can reduce its speed and still proceed; a ship can reef its sails, or lessen its speed, and yet make headway; but an air vehicle cannot drop below a certain minimum speed and remain afloat, in the present stage of the art, the high-speed gas engine, the only present available power for planes, is not only a delicate machine, but very sensitive to atmospheric changes, and the present type of the strongest planes requires favorable conditions for rising and landing, and even for flying. Only a day or two ago a naval hydroplane rising in a fog collided with the top of a clubhouse. However, all these are incidents usual to development of a new idea, and already several successful flights have been made by compass—one of 407 miles—and long-distance flights would probably be made at high elevations to avoid clouds and treacherous earth currents.

Until a dependable night service is possible, there would seem little present advantage to business interests in an air mail service which requires nine daylight hours, for at present air mail between New York and Chicago must be posted either long before, or received after, business hours. Both the 18-hour trains in service for years up to the war, and the present 20-hour trains, are far more serviceable, for a letter leaving New York at noon reaches Chicago at 9:15 A. M. the next day. Allowing one hour in which to deliver and two hours for reply, the answer leaves Chicago at 12:20 P. M. and reaches New York at 9:45 the following morning: a total of less than 46 hours, against 72 hours business time required by air service—unless letters are to be written and posted before six o'clock in the morning.

With the return of peace and the opportunity to develop the plane under conditions of deliberate experiment, the same spirit of inventive genius which evolved a heavier-than-air machine, can be counted on to perfect it. There will naturally be some days in every year in which no plane can navigate, just as there are now some days in which trains are stalled by snow or water, but a few unusual storms do not constitute the average weather, although there probably would be more such days for planes than railroads.

The perfection of planes in the next few years will be one of the most interesting features of a lifetime. In the meantime we must not demand nor expect too much.

There are those among the British aviators who predict that air travel will broaden and soften the minds of men as no other form of travel has, or can ever accomplish. Seen from the sky, the rapidly passing panorama below reveals great cities as mere spots, and vast railway systems as the faint lines of a spider's web. Large lakes become ponds, and one country blends into another in that harmonious whole which the Creator intended. Under these impressions the ego of the individual, and the petty selfishnesses of the human mind, fade into insignificance before the grandness of it all, while a vision of the millenium steals upon one's consciousness.

1,500,000 MEN KILLED

France Has Lost Equal Number Wounded.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16—France in four years of conflict, to preserve her own liberty and that of the world, according to Andre Tardie, French high commissioner to the United States, has lost 1,500,000 men killed and almost as many wounded. America owes France a debt of gratitude not only for this great sacrifice, but also for the reported saving of thousands of lives in this country due to the discovery by French peasants of a perfect remedy for stomach and intestinal ailments, the ingredients of which are imported from France by Geo. H. Mayr, a leading Chicago chemist, who sells it in America under the name of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. TO CABLE WILSON

Hungarians to Ask Justice for Their Native Land.

The annual convention of the Hungarian Sick Benefit society of Leisenring which opened, by John Mato, Sunday at 10 A. M., was closed Monday afternoon. Each of the 16 branches was represented by two delegates, and the Moose hall was almost filled by the leaders of the Hungarians of Connellsville and vicinity. The society grew wonderfully since last year's report was made and has a nice amount for the payment of sick and death benefits. However, there were nine deaths and much sickness last year incident to the influenza epidemic and it was decided to increase the amount by the assessment of one dollar extra at every death and that the monthly amount of $1.25 and the quarterly dues should be applied for the payment of sick benefits alone.

It was decided that the President of the United States should be requested by cablegram to a make a thorough and special study of the nations of Hungary before the peace conference opens, so that Hungary should be made a compact state and not to be divided unjustly by the misrepresentation of the Slavonic leaders.

ENGINEER FINDS ITS CLAIMS TRUTHFUL

Charles Dougherty, 2931 Garrett St., Phila., engineer for the D. B. Martin Co., says: "I suffered from stomach trouble and indigestion. The pain and distress in my stomach affected my appetite. For some days I could eat only sparingly and my rest and my sleep were broken. I heard about Tanlac and on trial I found its claims were truthful. I recommended Tanlac because it's really a great tonic. I can now eat well and sleep naturally. It did my wife even more good. She was badly run down."

The genuine Tanlac, which bears the name of J. I. Gore Co., on outside carton is now sold here by Beighley's Pharmacy, Connellsville Drug Co., Fred H. Harmening, C. Roy Hetzel and other leading druggists. Tanlac, the celebrated vegetable tonic, stomachic and health builder, is also sold in neighboring cities and towns. Ask for it.—Adv.

THINKS 319TH WILL RETURN TO HOMELAND WITHIN FEW WEEKS

Noised About in Command That Start for the States is to be Made in January.

Writing from France, Ralph Sliger, with Company H of the 319th Infantry, tells his wife of doing nothing but drilling and wading around in the mud. He says he hears the 319th will be returning home in January. The letter follows:

"It is mighty hard just now to sit down and write. I don't know just when we will get started home but we think we will be on the way some time in January. Of course, we are not sure. We are sick of this place. There is one Y. M. C. A. here and with nothing to do after drill hours but wade around in mud. A fellow just naturally gets blue. Perhaps it is homesickness, I don't know.

"I had not heard that Walter (his brother) was injured. I hope it is not serious. I have been worried about him because I have not heard from him since the last battle. Perhaps now I will see him soon in Connellsville. I am writing this letter at 6:30 A. M., before breakfast. Will close and get my breakfast. They tell us we won't get any more mail from home until we get to the coast. I don't know how true it is. I hope we get there soon, though. Don't worry if you don't hear from me from now on, as we may be on the move and not able to write."

Prof. U. L. Fife will address the institute at Centerville this evening.

MT. PLEASANT WINS

Local Team Loses to That Quintet by Five Points.

The Connellsville Independents lost to the Mount Pleasant Superiors last night at that place by five points, the score being 27-22. The locals led up until the latter part of the game when the Mount Pleasant team tied the score and took a lead of a few points.

The game was fast and rough, with not a slow moment in it. The Superiors showed improved form as the result of practice, but Connellsville was handicapped by the 12-inch style of basket.

VIGOROUS COMPLAINT

Against the P. R. R. For Commandeering Metallurgical Grade Coal.

The fact that the Pennsylvania Railroad company is demanding and receiving from the mines on its lines east of Pittsburg 1,152 cars of coal a week, which is commandeered by the Pittsburg Fuel Administration officials and turned over to it, is causing complaint from operators, by-product concerns, mills and manufacturers.

The coal commandeered by the railroad is of the metallurgical grade, used for coke, byproducts and manufacturing purposes generally. Little of this coal is of the steam variety, and the operators say that it should not be used for steam-making purposes by the railroad when it is so badly needed for metallurgical consumption.

The Fuel Administrator at Pittsburg has stated that the operators are right in their complaint, and that the Pennsylvania railroad has positively refused to accept coal for its engines from any source except the mines on its lines. This means that it will not accept coal from the Pennsylvania Lines West.

"The Pennsylvania Railroad," says the Fuel Administrator, "will not pay a freight rate of 65c a ton. For this reason I am furnishing the company 1,152 cars of coal a week directly from the mines along its road, much of it coming from the mines on the Pittsburg, Virginia & Charleston division. It is the order of the Federal Fuel Administration, and all I can do is to obey. In my opinion it is neither right nor fair to the operators or the coke and byproduct concerns who badly need this grade of coal. But I am powerless."

MINE WORKERS GIVE NOTICE THERE WILL BE NO WAGE CUT

Official Organ Declares an Attempt To Do So Will Be Opposed.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

Cannot be Met Without Maintaining a High Standard of Wages, It Is Claimed; Must be Reconstruction Along Other Lines, In the Broader Sense.

The current issue of the United Mine Workers' Journal, official organ of the United Mine Workers of America, says that, "positive, definite notice has been served by American labor that there will be no reduction of wages."

In discussing, "Why Should Employers Think of Slowing Down Business and Reducing Wages in This Present Period of Reconstruction?" the statement is made that, "Any attempt to lower the wage standards will be opposed in the most vigorous manner. This was made clear by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in his answer to W. H. Barr, head of the American Founders' Association, and by Frank J. Hayes, president of the United Mine Workers, in his recent public statement on the subject. President Hayes is the head of the largest labor organization in the world, and his words are the words of this body.

"However, even though some of the employers have expressed the view that lower wages are coming, it is not believed that their attitude is the real attitude of a majority of the employers of the country. Possibly most of the employers would be glad, indeed, if they could bring about a situation that would enable them to reduce the wages of their employes, but it is believed that they have not yet found a way to do this. As a general thing at this present moment employers are not exactly clear as to where they stand, and it is not at all likely that they will undertake any general or concerted effort to batter down the wages and lower the living conditions of their employes. These employers want business. Owners and managers of factories, mills and mines and the heads of industries in this country prefer to keep their plants in operation, but they can not do this without labor to operate them and to do the work.

"This is a very fine time for employers to refrain from making any attack on the wages of employes in this country. Rather it is a time when they should be thinking of raising wages to a higher level, so that their employes may be able to meet the tremendously high cost of living. Employers know that the present level of wages is not high enough to do this. The cost of living at this time is unprecedented in the history of America. It is wholly impossible for the laboring man to stretch his wages out sufficiently to cover the cost of keeping his family properly. He can not and will not stand for any reduction. Instead, he is going to insist that the wage standard be raised to a more equitable level.

"Some employers throughout the country do not seem to realize the true situation in regard to labor at this time, but it is believed that this class of employers is in the minority. Most of the employers are men with a breadth of business vision, and this class does not appear to be seriously inclined to undertake any movement for antagonizing labor in needless fashion, thus creating a condition that labor would oppose to the bitter end.

"'Reconstruction' does not mean alone the reconstruction of buildings and property, in these reconstruction days there must be reconstruction also along other lines. It should mean reconstruction of the relations of employer and employe; reconstruction of living conditions; reconstruction of opportunities; reconstruction of ambitions, hopes and purposes; reconstruction of that man-to-man feeling without which mankind can not progress. It should be reconstruction in its broader, not its narrower sense."

New Cars Built in November.

A total of 735 cars were constructed for the Railroad Administration during November. Of the 728 freight cars built in railroad shops, 183 were of the hopper type, 69 gondolas, 14 coke rack and 401 box cars.

TEST KIDNEYS AFTER INFLUENZA

Alarming Increase in Kidney and Bladder Disorders Traced to Recent Epidemic.

Influenza is a robber of health and strength, say doctors. While lasting but a few days and comparatively easy of itself to cure, a brief attack often leaves the Kidneys and Bladder in a greatly weakened condition from which recovery, without proper treatment, is slow if not impossible.

If you have had Influenza, and now have to urinate frequently, getting in and out of bed several times a night, or if your urine is dark and cloudy or full of sediment and strong in odor, you should by all means use at once a good safe regulator to clean out the clogged up impurities in your kidneys and set them working right again.

There is a simple, harmless treatment called SOLVAX which is excellent and you can make a very convincing test of it in this way. First, save a sample of your present urine. Then get from A. A. Clarke or any local druggist a small package of Solvax and take a few doses during the day and one before you go to bed. See how much better you sleep—how fine you feel in the morning. After a week's use of Solvax take another sample of urine and compare with the old. Let this simple test and your own eyesight tell the story. Solvax is recommended to wash out Kidney and Bladder impurities and stop Kidney misery before it is too late. It is not at all expensive and any reliable druggist will sell it on a guarantee of money back if in any case it does not bring quick relief.—Adv.

WALTER SLIGER, FOUR DAYS ON THE STRANDED NORTHERN PACIFIC, WRITES ABOUT IT

Writing from the Greenhut hospital in New York, Walter Sliger, a son of Mrs. O. J. Sliger of West Patterson avenue, tells of being aboard the transport Northern Pacific for four days while it was stranded off Fire Island. He said it was necessary to hold on to the bed railing to keep from being thrown out of bed. He is hoping to be transferred to a Pittsburg hospital soon for treatment of his wounds. The letter follows:

"Just a few lines to let you know that I am getting along fine here. You need not worry for I am not hurt very badly, but it will be several months yet until I can come home. You know they will not let anyone go until they are completely recovered. A small bone in my left leg was fractured and then it became infected, but it is completely healed up now. Just a scab where the wound was. It will be a month or so before I can walk on it.

"I may come to Pittsburg in a week or so. They are leaving here every day for a hospital nearest their homes. I was so glad to hear that Ralph was all right, for I knew that his division had been in the St. Mihiel drive and also that last one at Verdun. We were in the Argonne forest at the same time.

"Did you read in the paper about the Northern Pacific going aground off Fire Island. I was on her four days after she wrecked. It went ashore on New Year morning and we got off on the fourth. I was glad to get off, for it is not very pleasant when you have to hold on to the bed rail to keep from falling out of bed and then going to sleep not knowing whether you will wake up floating in salt water or not.

"We had a good time out of it at that. Had everything we wanted to eat. All kinds of fruit, meat, milk, eggs and then we had music all the time. So you see we made the best of it. Everyone was taken off and none the worse for the experience.

"I guess I will stop now. If I come to Pittsburg soon, I will try to come home for a few days, or you can come down. It will not be so far."

At the Theatres

COUNTRY GROCERY STORE.

There'll be a crush and a jam at the Soisson theatre tonight for in addition to the splendid production of the Millionaire's Son and the Shopgirl, the management announces another of those really worth while country grocery store nights that were so popular last season. The Millionaire's Son and the Shopgirl is just the sort of play the public seems to hugely enjoy. The interesting plot is relieved by comedy that is real comedy. The climaxes are of the thrilling type, making in all two hours of rare enjoyment. Tomorrow matinee an night a brand new version of Kearney from Killarney, entitled A Young Girl's Romance, will be seen with Glenn Coulter in the leading role. He and other members of the company introduce specialties and musical numbers throughout the action of the play. The Manhattan players' final week commences next Monday matinee with a beautiful scenic production of The Naughty Wife, a play no woman or young girl can afford to miss. It is a recent New York success and will prove a delight.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"JUST FOR TONIGHT"—A Goldwyn feature in which the unassuming Tom Moore, acts as though he had been a member of the English nobility all his life, is being presented today. "Just for Tonight" tells the story of a man who, in his adventure-filled quest of love, is confronted by situations that would have balked a less determined person than Theodore Whitney, Jr. The girl for whom he risks all hides her identity from him for some strange reason and that adds to his many trials. She is the niece of Major Blackburn, whose home has been robbed of costly jewels. At the same time Whitney's father is shocked by the loss of valuable mining stock certificates. The same detectives are employed on both cases. The girl has a strange affair with a mysterious man she meets at frequent intervals at night on the lawn. This leads the detectives to suspect her of the robbery, but when the major is informed of their suspicions he orders the detectives from his house. But both mysteries are solved when Whitney poses as Lord Roxenham at the Blackburn home. How he later receives the missing certificate and uncovers a band of jewel robbers after being exposed as an impostor brings a thrilling climax and supplies a splendid setting for a love scene with Whitney and the girl as the principal figures. A selected comedy is also being shown. Both attractions will also be shown tomorrow.

SAYS COLD WEATHER BRINGS RETURN OF INFLUENZA

Public Must be Careful to Avoid a Second Epidemic. Easier to Prevent Than Cure. What to do.

"Encouraging reports of the fewer cases of influenza in this vicinity should not allow us to relax our vigilance or to become careless in the belief that the danger is all over," says a well known authority. With the coming of cold weather there is apt to be a return of this frightful epidemic and its seriousness will depend on the extent of the precautions taken by the public to prevent infection.

When the air is full of influenza germs, you may be constantly breathing them into your nose and throat. But their danger may be avoided and you may make yourself practically immune to infection if you destroy the germ before it actually begins work in your blood.

During the recent serious epidemic, which hit Connellsville so hard, most successful results were obtained by many through the simple breathing into the nose, throat and lungs of the medicated air of oil of Hyomei. Probably no better, safer or more sensible precaution against Influenza, Grippe, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis or Catarrh of the nose and throat could be employed than to go now to the nearest drug store and get a complete Hyomei outfit consisting of a bottle of the pure Oil of Hyomei and a little vestpocket hard rubber inhaling device into which a few drops of the oil are poured.

Carry this inhaler with you during the day and each half hour or so put it in your mouth and draw deep breaths of its pure healing germicidal air into the passages of your nose, throat and lungs to destroy any germs that may have found lodgement there. This simple precaution may save you a serious illness and the loss of several weeks work. It is pleasant to use and not at all expensive as the inhaler will last a lifetime and further supplies of the Oil of Hyomei can be had at any drug store for a few cents.

Hundreds of people in this vicinity used Hyomei in this way during the recent crisis and avoided danger. They should not neglect it now for the danger is by no means over.

DUNBAR TOWNSHIP MOTOR TRUCK IS IN ACTION ONCE MORE

Supervisor Charles Hardy Making Use of It to Distribute Ashes and Slag on Roads.

PECHIN, Jan. 16—Township Supervisor Charles V. Hardy has gotten the township motor truck in working order again and is improving the moderate weather in putting ashes and slag on the rough places in the roads. The truck was badly damaged last September at Pechin when a West Penn car ran into it, and the stress of business prevented the repair of the damage until recently. The collision was said to be the fault of the motorman of the car, and West Penn was to foot the repair bill. If the truck had not been put out of commission much more of the road would have been surfaced with slag last autumn. But as it was, this work had to be foregone until the truck was ready for use.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, forms toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, are those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphat act on the inside organs.—Adv.

The THIRTEENTH COMMANDMENT

by

RUPERT HUGHES

COPYRIGHT BY HARPER & BROTHERS

It was evident, from the way the waiter snatched the plate from the table, that Clay had not tipped him. In fact, Clay said, "This will be a lesson to you."

They slumped down the steps. The starter said, "Cab, sir?" and made to whistle one up. Clay shook his head and walked on toward the monument of Grant. Daphne followed. They went as humbly as a couple of paupers evicted for the rent.

Daphne was afraid to speak. She saw that Clay was sick with wrath, and she did not know him well enough to be sure how he would take her interference in his thoughts. She trudged along in utter shame.

The worst of her shame was that she was so ashamed of it. Why should she care who her waiter smiled at or frowned? But she did care, infinitely.

Daphne could not pump up any enthusiasm for the scenery. Her lover took no advantage of the serial of arbors and the embracing bowers. He never kissed her, not once.

Daphne came to be sorry for Clay and felt sorry for her neglected self. Then she grew angry at herself. Then at him.

At length he said, with ominous sweetness, "Are you going to walk all the way, dear?"

"You said you wanted to, didn't you?' he mumbled, thickly.

"That's so.

She trudged some distance farther—a few blocks it was; it seemed miles. Then she said, "How far is it home—altogether?"

"About three miles and a half.'

"Is that all? The bellhop of an English hotel I've been reading used to dash off five or six miles before breakfast."

Patriotism and pride helped her for a quarter of a mile. Then she resigned.

"I guess I don't belong. I'll resign.' me a cab.'

"Pretty long along here, urged her on.

from one jail to another.

Her young lover had dazzled her with his heedless courtship, flown away with her on motor wings, dipping to earth now and then to sip refreshments at a high cost, and then swooping off with her again.

And now his wings had broken; his gasoline was gone; his motor burnt out; and the rest of the journey was to be the same old trudge.

She had been leaning heavily on Clay's arm. Now she put it away from her in a mixture of pity for him and of self-reproof. When he protested, she said:

"I think I'll walk better alone for a while."

So she hobbled and hobbled by herself, he pleading to be allowed to help her. But she kept him away.

And they crept on a little further, loving each other piteously.

In the course of time they reached the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument, and Daphne sank down at the base of it.

"I can't go any farther," she said, "not if I die of starvation." He sank down at her side. The moon peered at them between the columns and the cella of the monument, and seemed to tilt its face to one side and smile. A motorcar went by with the silence of a loping panther. Another car passing it threw a calcium light on Tom Duane and his guests and his chauffeur. How gorgeously they sped! If Daphne had had a bit of luck she would be with them, soaring on the pinions of money, instead of hobbling on without it.

Daphne took off her slippers and fondled her poor abused feet as if they were her children. But when she tried to thrust them back into her slippers for a final desperate effort she almost shrieked with the hurt.

"I'll have to go the rest of the way in my stocking feet," she moaned.

"Not if I have to carry you," Clay growled.

Before he had a chance to carry out his resolution a taxicab that had deposited its fares at an apartment house above went bowling by with its flag up.

Clay ran out and howled at it till it stopped, circled round, and drew up by the bridle-path. Then he ran to Daphne and bundled her into it, and gave her address to the driver.

"But how are you going to pay him?" she sighed, blissfully, as they shot along. "Not that I care at all."

"I haven't figured that out," said Clay. "I'll drop you at home and then take him to my club and see if I can't borrow from somebody there. If I can't, I'll give him my watch or the fight of his life."

"That's terrible!" Daphne sighed. "To think how much I have cost you!"

"Well, I wanted to give you a good time on your little visit," said Clay, "and it's only two days till my next salary day."

Her heart sank. Her guess was right. His bank account was dry. It had gurgled out in amusing her. She felt that there was something here that would take a bit of thinking about—when she had rested enough to think.

The taxicab swung into Fifty-ninth street and drew up to the curb. Clay helped Daphne out and said to the chauffeur, "Wait!"

He said it with just the tone he had used when he said to the waiter, "Check!"

When Clay had kissed her his seventeenth farewell and was wondering how he could tear himself away from her without bleeding to death, Daphne pressed the bell.

Instead of her drowsy mother opening the door half an inch and fleeing in her curl-papers, Bayard himself appeared in his bathrobe and pajamas.

"Bayard!" Daphne gasped as she sprang for him. "What on earth brought you home so soon?"

"Money gave out," he laughed.

"Hello, Clay," he said as he put forth his hand. "Mother tells me you've been secretly engaged to my sister all this time, you old scoundrel! How are you? What's the good word?"

"Lend me five dollars," said Clay.

CHAPTER VI.

The meeting of Daphne and her new sister-in-law was not what either would have expected or selected. Daphne was tired in body and soul, discouraged, footsore and dismayed about her love and her lover. She had reached the door of the apartment in the mood of a wave-buffeted, outswum castaway, eager for nothing but to lie down in the sand and sleep.

Daphne could imagine the feelings of her brother's wife when she reached her home after a long ocean voyage, a night landing, the customhouse ordeal, and the cab ride among the luggage, and found a mother-in-law asleep in her bed and a sister-in-law yet to arrive!

Bayard and Leila, serene in the belief that Daphne and her mother had gone back to Cleveland, entered the apartment without formality and went about switching on lights, recovering their little home from the night with magic instantaneity.

Mother Kip's awakening came from the light that Bayard flashed in his bedroom. Leila had a lovable disposition, but she was tired, and all the way up in the overloaded cab she had thought longingly of the beautiful bed in her own new home, and had promised herself a quick plunge into it for a long stay. How could she rejoice to see, though she bore the sacred name of mother-in-law?

Mother Kip ordered Bayard and Leila out of their own room and when she was ready to be seen she had so many apologies to make and accept that the meeting entirely lacked the rapture it should have expressed. Even a mother could hardly be glad to see her son in such discouraging circumstances. All three exchanged questions more and more perfunctorily, and kept repeating themselves. The most popular question was, "I wonder where Daphne is?"

They could not know that she was bobbling down the wilderness of Riverside drive. She, too, was thinking longingly of her bed. But long before she reached it her mother had moved in and established herself across a good deal more than half of it. It was a smallish bed in a smallish bedroom.

Leila fell asleep in her tub and might have drowned without noticing the difference if her yawning husband had not saved her life—and very cleverly: he was too tired to lift her from the water, so he lifted the stopper and let the water escape from her. She almost resented the rescue, but eventually got herself to bed in a prettily sullen stupor.

From some infinite depth of peace she was dragged up protesting. Bayard was telling her of Daphne's arrival. Doggedly she began to prepare an elaborate toilet, but Bayard hailed her out before she was ready. This was the final test of Leila's patience and of Daphne's.

It was a tribute to both that they hated the collision more than each other. Their greetings were appropriately emotional and noisy, and they both talked at once in a manner that showed a certain congeniality.

It Was a Tribute to Both That They Hated the Collision More Than Each Other.

When at length Daphne went to her room she observed her mother's extra-territorial holdings. She stretched herself along the narrow coastline in despair of rest. But she was too tired to worry or lie awake and she slept thoroughly.

The next morning the three women, about to meet one another by daylight, made their preparations with the scrupulous anxiety of candidates for presentation at court. In consequence, breakfast was late and the only man there, except the evanescent waiter from the restaurant below, was Bayard.

A troop of business worries like a swarm of gnats had wakened him early. He had escaped some of them in Europe, for the honeymoon had been a prolonged and beatific interlude in his office hours; but marriage was not his career. His career was his work, and that was recalling him, rebuking him, as with far-off bugle alarms.

He was so restless that he merely glanced at the headlines of the paper. He was preoccupied when he kissed his mother and Daphne good morning, and he paced up and down the dining room like a caged leopard till Leila arrived.

Her trousseau had included boudoir gowns of the most ravishing description and she wore her best one to breakfast. Daphne and Mrs. Kip made all the desirable exclamations at the cost and the cut of it. Even Bayard paid her a tribute.

"Isn't she a dream, mother? Aren't you proud of her, Duph?"

They agreed that she was and they were, and Bayard drew his chair up to the table with pride.

It was the bride's last breakfast and the housewife's first. That is, Leila was not really a housewife; only an apartment wife, with nearly everything done for her except the spending of her time. She had to spend her own time.

This breakfast was the funeral of the honeymoon, and Leila hung with graceful dejection over the coffee cup. It might have been a cup of hemlock, judging from the posture of her woe. But the he-brute, attracted by a portion of a headline, had his newspaper and was gulping it down with his coffee.

He was so absorbed in the mere clash of two Mexican generals and the danger of American intervention that he forgot the all-important demands of love, and ignored the appalling fact that he had only a few minutes left before he must take his departure.

It was a pitiful awakening to the new Mrs. Kip. She was being taught that she was not important enough to keep her husband's mind or his body close at home. He had said that she was all the world to him, and, behold! she was only a part of it. He had said that he could think of nothing else and desired nothing else but her. Now he had her and he was thinking of everything else. He had to have a newspaper to tell him all about everything in the world.

The sight of Leila's anguish over the breakfast obsequies of the honeymoon chilled Daphne's hope of marriage bliss like a frost ravening among peach blossoms.

Her sympathies would ordinarily have been with her brother in any dispute between him and his wife. But this was a dispute between Bayard and love. It was sacrilegious for him to go on reading the Times when his bride had so much more important things to discuss. He heard her discuss them as through a morning paper darkly, and he made the wrong answers, and finally he snatched out his watch, glared it in the face, gasped, and attacked the last of his breakfast like a train-catcher at a lunch-counter.

It was thus that he heard Leila wail, "What's to become of me all morning?"

Bayard stared at her sharply, but spoke softly enough: "Why, I don't know, honey. There ought to be plenty for you to do. The Lord knows there's enough for me at the office."

"All right," sighed Leila. "I'll be brave and worry through somehow, till noon, with my sweet new sister's help. But we'll come down and lunch with you. About what time do you go out to luncheon, By?"

Bayard's answer was discouraging: "This is one of the three days a week when the heads of the firm always lunch at Delmonico's in a private room. I'm afraid I can't lunch with you today."

"And you'll leave me this whole terrible day? I can never exist so long without you."

"I'm mighty sorry, honey. But men must work, and-so-forth. I've been away too long. The office needs me. And I've spent a lot of money, and I've got to go down and earn some more to buy pretty things for my beauty."

This brightened her in a way he had not expected, and a little too far beyond his hopes. Gloom left her face like a cloud whipped from before the sun. She dazzled him with her smile.

"Oh, I know what to do! Daphne and your mother and I can go shopping."

Bayard's heart flopped. He wondered what on earth more there was in the shops that she could want to buy. She had come to the marriage with her trousseau only partly completed, on account of the haste of the wedding. But she had bought and bought in Europe. She had made his honeymoon anxious by her rapacity for beautiful things to wear. And now that they had come to New York with their old trunks bulging and new trunks bought abroad bulging, and had paid a thumping sum at the custom house, now she was still eager to go shopping!

What he wanted to do was to quit buying for a while and sell something.

He did not say this. Love was slipping the bandage off one eye; but it had not yet removed the sugar stick that stops the tongue from criticism.

Leila grew more cheerful at a terrifying rate: "Go on to your old luncheon, my dear child, and Daphne and your mother and I will go on a spree in the shops. Then we'll all have a banquet tonight and a theater, and if we're not too tired, a supper; and if you're very good I'll take you to one of those dancing places afterward. I'll buy the theater tickets myself. I'll get good ones. I want to save you as much trouble as I can, honey. So run along to your office and don't worry about us. But you must miss me—frightfully! Will you?"

He vowed that he would, and he meant it. She was a most missable creature.

He rose to leave, but she stopped him to say, "What play shall we see?"

This was the occasion for elaborate debate till Bayard gave signs of trumpeting his wrath and bolting.

Leila graciously released him only to call him back to say that he had forgotten his newspaper.

"I left it for you. Don't you want to read it?" he asked. "I can get another at the subway station."

She shook her head: "There's nothing interesting in the papers. I'm just from Paris, and I know more about the fashions than they do."

Bayard shuddered a little, inly. The times were epic. Immortal progress was being made as never before: ancient despotisms were turning into republics, republics were at war with one another; constitutions, labor problems, life problems, all social institutions, were being ripped up and remade, all the relations of masters and men, mistresses, children, wives, animals.

Yet Leila said there was nothing in the papers! Revolutionary news meant to her a change in the fashion in sleeves, the shift of the equatorial waistline a trifle nearer the bust or a trifle nearer the hips, the release of the ankles from tight skirts. The great rebellion in her world was the abrupt decision of the dressmakers that after years of costumes clinging more and more closely to the human outline they would depart from it in every way possible. Leila was interested vitally in what women would wear and what they would leave off, and grandly indifferent to which nations were sho ing at which. Bayard hesitated, pealed again to his watch, gasped the hour and the minutes, kissed Le violently, kissed Daphne and kis his mother and rushed for the do Leila put out her arms again.

"I must be last," she cried, and he bowed into her arms she kissed par and whispered, "and first, too, a all the betweens."

Bayard was a business man from cradle days. He loved promptitu He blushed to arrive late at his off and set a bad example to his stem raphers and clerks. It was his cra that success comes to those who arr earlier on the battlefield than the o ers, fight harder, stay longest the and end every day with the next da maneuvers clearly realized as part the next month's campaign.

There was need for concentration his business, for he had brought ba from Europe a sense of great disus in the air. And there was no encou agement in American business exce an instinctive feeling that the wo must be over because it had lasted long.

PLACE IN GRAND CIRCUIT RACING EVENTS

DIRECTUM J. ENTITLED TO FIRST PLACE.

The 31 members of the Grand circuit 1213 heats—16 meetings which covered a period of 17 weeks, and distributed $469,[illegible] in premiums," says H. Gocher of the Brooklyn Eagle. "Two hundred and fifty races were contested, 116 of them being for trotters and 104 for pacers. One thousand and forty-six horses started in the trotting races and 647 in the events for pacers, 452 heats being required to find the winners in the former and 339 in the latter.

"Of the horses that made the trip from North Randall to Atlanta Directum J. is entitled to first place. He has started in 14 races of which he won 11, was second in two and third once, while at Lexington he acquired a mark of 2 01½, showing that he had more speed at the end of the campaign than when it opened.

Divide Honors.

"June Red and the four year old filly Ante Guy divided the honors in the second division. Each of them took the field in 13 races of which June Red won eight and Ante Guy seven, while Directum defeated the Red Mountain mare on their last appearance at Atlanta. June Red won her first race at the North Randall inaugural meeting and continued in front of her fields until she met Chilicot in the Massachusetts at Readville and Charter Oak purse at Hartford as well as Prince Loree in the Empire State purse at Syracuse. She also won again at Columbus and Atlanta.

"Ante Guy made her first start in July at North Randall where she was unplaced to Binland in 2 05¾ in the race in which the Transylvania winner defeated Hollyrood Kate. Her next appearance was at Toledo, where she won two races, and followed them by another victory at Columbus. Alma Forbes defeated her in 2.06¾ at the second North Randall meeting, that event being the only one credited to the daughter of J. Malcolm Forbes out of 15 starts.

Ante Guy Starts.

"When Chilicot pulled up lame at Hartford Ante Guy was made the stake horse of the Murphy stable and after finishing second to Prince Loree in the $10,000 events at Syracuse and Columbus, she caught the Prince McKinney gelding in the Buckeye purse and defeated him in 2 04¾. She also repeated the performance at Lexington, where she won the Walnut Hall cup, breezing in 2 04¾, and followed it with two victories at Atlanta.

"Billy Jackson and Royal Mac each made 12 starts on the trip down the line, the Royal McKinney gelding's only victory being recorded at Columbus where he defeated Binland in the mud, but was in turn beaten by him in the Transylvania at Lexington in the fastest four heat race on record. Billy Jackson scored his first victory by winning at Syracuse. He also showed in front again at Columbus the following week in 2 04¾ and followed it by two wins at Lexington."

JOHN HEYDLER HEAD OF NATIONAL LEAGUE

Unanimously Elected President, Treasurer and Secretary.

Had Been Connected With Executive Office for Fifteen Years—Began His Baseball Career as an Umpire.

As was expected, John A. Heydler was elected unanimously for a term of three years as president of the National league, at its annual meeting in New York. He will continue at his present post of secretary-treasurer in addition to serving as head of the organization.

President John A. Heydler.

Mr. Heydler had been acting president since the resignation of John K. Tener last summer. He had acted as president once previously after the death of President Pulliam in 1909, till his successor, Thomas J. Lynch, was elected. He is thoroughly conversant with every detail of the national game, having been connected with the national league executive office for the past 15 years.

Mr. Heydler was born at La Fargeville, N. Y., July 10, 1869. His first professional experience in baseball is as a National league umpire in 1898, when the double-umpire system was first established. Prior to that he was a writer, and was once sporting editor of the Washington Post. In 1902, at the request of President Pulliam, he compiled the National league averages for that season, and became the president's private secretary in 1903. In 1907, when the office of president-secretary-treasurer of the National league was split, Mr. Heydler was appointed secretary.

Delighted.

The examining officers at the prisoner pens talk German like natives, but often the prisoners don't and that adds to complications.

One inquisitor who had just used his best German vocabulary on an uncomprehending Hungarian, turned him over to a special questioner and took a dive. Five strangely-clad and somewhat bewildered prisoners who, after a great deal of shouting and arm waving, managed to convey the fact that they were neither Germans nor Austrians nor Hungarians nor Slovaks. They were Italians—five Italians taken prisoner at fall and set to mending roads behind the German lines.

They were much pleased when it story dawned on them what had happened, and they wanted to kiss Gen. Pershing or somebody right away.

STORY OF "BONEHEAD" PLAY

Runner Steals Second, Then Steals Back to First When Teammate Is Tagged at Plate.

Jake Daubert, the best first baseman in the National league, tells a yarn about the greatest "marble-head" play he ever saw on the diamond.

It has something on John Anderson's feat of stealing second with a runner on the keystone sack.

"The last exhibition game we played last spring was at Lynchburg," says Daubert. "The field there is inside the race track at the fair grounds, and the catcher is some distance from the grand stand. There were so few spectators at the game that Manager Dahlen suggested inviting them to come down and sit on the players' bench.

"The Lynchburg team got men on first and third in the eighth inning when the runner on first was caught off the bag on a throw by Erwin. In chasing him up and down the line I got him within ten feet of second base when I detected the runner on third starting for the plate. Quickly I threw the ball to Erwin, who got his man. My man seeing the play, touched second and immediately started back to first base, which he reached safely after a long slide as neither myself nor the second baseman were looking for any 'inside stuff' of this character. It was the prize boneheaded stunt and beat anything I ever saw."

UNCERTAIN AS TO SOLDIERS

Major League Players May Not Be Released in Time to Get Back for Spring Practice.

There is still much uncertainty about the prospects for getting back in time for spring practice all of the major players now in the military and naval service. One theory was that General March intended to discharge soldier players as soon as might be, irrespective of the demobilization of their units. The other theory was that General March would do no such thing. He had recommended baseball so highly as a sort of semi-public utility that many thought he would make exceptions for the athletes in the army, but that is beginning to be doubted, and no man can say at present precisely what material the clubs will have when they count noses.

It might be mentioned, by the way, that the Eighty-ninth division, in which is the artillery regiment containing Clarence Mitchell and Chuck Ward of the Superbas, and Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Cubs, has left its former camp on the old battle line and has joined the troops advancing into Germany.

LONG AFTER

Influenza

Reports Show That Strength, Energy and Ambition Return Very Slowly to Grippe Patients.

After an attack of influenza, doctors advise that nature be assisted in its building up process by the use of a good tonic—one that will not only put strength and endurance into the body, but will also help to build up and strengthen the run down cells of the brain.

One of the most highly recommended remedies to put energy into both body and brain is Bio-feren—your physician knows the formula—it is printed below.

There's iron in Bio-feren—the kind of iron that makes red blood corpuscles and creates vigor. There is lecithin also, probably the best brain invigorator known to science. Then there is good old reliable gentian that brings back your lagging appetite.

There are other ingredients that help to promote good health, as you can see by reading this formula, not forgetting kola, that great agent that puts the power of endurance into weak people.

Taken altogether Bio-feren is a splendid active tonic that will greatly help any weak, run down person to regain normal strength, energy ambition and endurance.

Bio-feren is sold by all reliable druggists and is inexpensive. For weakness after influenza patients are advised to take two tablets after each meal and one at bed time—seven a day until health, strength and vigor are fully restored.

It will not fail to help you and if for any reason you are dissatisfied with results your druggist is authorized to return your money upon request—without any red tape of any kind.

Note to physicians—There is no secret about the formula of Bio-feren—it is printed on every package. Here it is: Lecithin, Calcium Glycero-phosphate, Iron Peptonate, Manganese Peptonate, Ext. Nux. Vomica, Powdered Gentian, Phenolphthalein, Glycerin, Capsicum, Kola.

REGION MAKES FURTHER GAIN IN THE PRODUCTION OF COKE

But Output of Coal Drops Behind the Recent Weekly Average.

BY-PRODUCT DEMAND OFF

Practically No Call for Steam Coal; Furnace Coke Being Absorbed as Fast as Produced; Continued but Slow Increase in Output Expected.

From The Weekly Courier.

Further progress was made last week by the coke region in getting back to the pre-holiday rate of production. The gain was not quite so substantial as that made during the week ending January 4, but it was even better than had been expected, regard being had for the slowing down incident to the celebration of Greek Christmas.

Last week the coke tonnage was 271,386, a gain of 17,386 tons, as compared with a gain of 21,790 during the week of January 4, showing that the interruption to regular operation from observance of the week's festival was comparatively slight, remembering that during the week ending December 28 the loss in production was 56,315 tons

Coal production has shown a pronounced tendency in the other direction, the gain of 45,853 tons during the week of January 4 having been transformed into a loss of 2 653 tons last week Aggregate tonnage of the region continues to gain, however, due to the increase in coke Reduced to its coal equivalent last week's coke production represents 407,049 tons Adding the 170 915 tons of raw coal shipped the contribution of the region to the country s fuel supply is shown to have been 577,964 tons, or 20,426 tons more than during the preceding week.

While existing coke contracts absorb coke as fast as it is produced, and there is an absence of inquiry for the furnace grade, a pronounced decline has taken place in the demand for coal. For steaming purposes the demand may be said to have practically ceased, while producers find by-product operators more and more disposed to reduce their requisitions. In consequence by-product coal movement, for the first time for more than a year past, has been adversely affected by the absence of demand. Until this condition developed coal output was limited only by the capacity of the mine working forces and the ability of the railroads to transport it.

Almost every factor favors a continued increase in the production of coke, which it may be reasonably expected will continue unless a period of severe winter weather intervenes or the demand should slacken. This is not looked for so long as the present rate of pig iron production is maintained, while the early spring is looked forward to as the time when a revival will take place in steel demand with its resultant reflex in a larger coke demand.

With the exception of a temporary shortage in motive power, which interfered somewhat with car supply at plants served from West Brownsville Junction last week, no complaint is heard of transportation service.

Estimated coke tonnage for the week ending Saturday, January 11, was 271,386 tons, furnished by the districts as follows: Connellsville, 141,460, an increase of 11,020 tons, Lower Connellsville, 128,906 tons, an increase of 6,366 tons, or a total increase of 17,386 tons By interests the production was: Merchant, 121,246 tons, an increase of 4,142 tons, furnace, 150,020, an increase of 13,244 tons.

COKE TRADE SUMMARY.

The gain in coke production, which began the first week of the year, was continued last week but not at quite the same rate. The observance of Greek Christmas had the expected effect of slowing down production in proportion to the number of celebrants participating, but that the increase for the week was 17 386 tons compared with the increase of 21 790 tons during the week of January 4 shows that better results were achieved than had been expected

While coke output kept up an upward trend, to a total of 271 386 tons, coal failed even to hold its own the 170 915 tons shipped being a decrease of 2 653 tons from the week preceding This was the direct consequence of a marked decline or almost no demand for steam coal and a curtailment in the requisitions from by-product oven operators Furnace coke is being absorbed by contracts as fast as produced, but there is an absence of inquiry, traceable to the fact that furnacemen are disposed to slow down until the pig iron market becomes more active A steel revival is expected in the early spring with its usual resultant effect upon coke

The position of the market is phenomenally strong Prices remain unchanged there are practically no offerings of furnace coke and only very limited offerings of foundry The only weakening is in screenings which are being offered and sold at a discount from the fixed limits of price.

COAL SCARCITY IN EUROPE CARRIES THE BOLSHEVISM MENACE

Says the Special Commission of Fuel Administration Which Made an Investigation of Fuel Conditions.

In the judgment of the special commission sent by Dr Garfield of the Fuel Administration to report upon fuel conditions in Europe, the scarcity of coal there carries with it the dangerous menace of Bolshevism.

"No European country has enough coal,' says the report of the commission. "In Italy and Switzerland the privations felt by its lack are acute, and in general the question of how the various peoples will react toward a continuance of difficult conditions which they endured in war times is a sober one.

"In Italy there has been no coal for household heating, gas for cooking was limited to four hours a day and since November 1, the tonnage allotted to gas plants has been sixty per cent of normal Non-war industries have received ten per cent of normal requirements, and less in some instances. Wood burning has nearly exhausted the available supply of that fuel within transportation distance. Switzerland is also uncomfortable to a notable degree.

"Shortages in Switzerland are probably not so acute, and Belgium for the moment, has a sufficient supply The importation of American coal is almost entirely a question of transportation and freight rates according to the report. This nation alone among the belligerents increased its coal output during the war

"Coal bears a very close relation to social unrest. The populations of the European belligerents have, during the war, suffered privations in varying degrees through lack of fuel Will they continue to endure similar privations in peace times without active protest? Again, should the shutting down of factories, either directly through lack of coal, or indirectly through lack of transportation on account of failure of coal, result in throwing thousands out of work will not a fertile field be provided for Bolshevism? Italy and Switzerland are today confronted with this situation and it is an active possibility elsewhere

"There appears to be no doubt that Europe is facing a real and prospective shortage. Italy, Switzerland, Norway, Denmark and Sweden produce practically no coal of their own and Holland and Spain have but little England France Belgium, Germany and Austria Hungary are conflicting and unreliable but in any event are far from indicating an over supply

"France s production has for some time been 20 000,000 tons per year short of her consumption, and she is today calling upon England for that amount. Belgium during normal times produces 3,000 000 tons a year less than she consumes, but at the moment has in prospect a sufficient supply on account of the prostration of her industries England, which has always supplied the needs of Italy and France, has suffered a falling off in production from 287,000 000 tons in 1913 to less than 230 000,000 tons in 1918 Her coal for export fell from 77,000,000 tons in 1913 to 37 000 000 tons in 1917

MUST BE VIOLENCE

Before Death From Organic Weakness Becomes Compensable.

The State Compensation Board has refused to award compensation where it is found that a man died of apoplexy or from rupture of a blood vessel in the brain while at work

This decision holds that violence was not done to the body by the accident, but that the death was due to organic weakness

In another case the board has upheld the referee and dismissed an appeal in which it is held that claims of death resulting from tuberculosis alleged to have been superinduced by a blow 'must be established by convincing testimony.'

Addition of $60,000,000 Made to First Estimate of Railroad Deficit.

A deficit of $196,000,000 has been reported by Director General of Railroads McAdoo in a revised estimate sent to the Senate This is an addition of $60,000,000 to the original estimate which showed that railroad earnings under Federal control for the calendar year of 1918 would fall short by $136,000 000

He attributes the difference between actual November figures and the estimate for the month as wholly due o reduction in operating revenues and to wage increases including back pay The falling off of business for November amounted to $6 000 000 The increase in expense is estimated at $22,000 000 Though the returns for the month of November are not complete they indicate the operating income for the month will be less by about $28,000 000

WEEKLY REPORTS

No Longer Required from Consumers and Dealers in Coal.

Announcement has been made by the Fuel Administration that weekly coal supply reports will not be required from industrial consumers and dealers after February 1 Over 60,000 of these reports have been received weekly by the statistical bureau of the Administration since last June, the tabulated results have been utilized in distributing fuel.

"The individual reports have been treated confidently by the state fuel administrators and by the Washington headquarters, and have been of great value in the problems of coal distribution during the past year, and will be invaluable as records for future use," says a statement of the Fuel Administration.
